Gerda Stevenson

Gerda is an award-winning actor, theatre director, author and singer-songwriter. Her collection of poems 'If This were Real' was reviewed in the Sunday Herald as "the best of the new in contemporary Scottish poetry – not to be missed". Her second collection 'Quines' – poems in tribute to women of Scotland, is described by Lesley Riddoch as "a vivid explosion of thought and bold opinion – a wonderful, life-affirming book". www.gerdastevenson.co.uk

Born in Broughty Ferry and now living in Carnoustie, John has been winning awards since his first collection 'The Apple Ghost'. His other collections are 'Undark' (Poetry Book Society Recommendation); 'Grain' (short-listed for the Griffin International Poetry Prize and the Ted Hughes Award) and 'The Golden Mean' (winner of 2015 Roehampton Poetry Prize). www.johnglenday.com
